

Post-trip: Back home in London Town

It feels very strange and slightly surreal being back home. There are no twinkling rickshaw bells outside of the window, an absence of amazing smelling street food, no constant and frenetic noise of life in it's most 'in your face' form being played and enjoyed by millions of people crowded together into a crazy small area. Everything seems too ordered and clinical somehow. Ah Dhaka, I miss you already!

Orphantrust

the poorest countries in the world with over half the population living on less than $1 a day

<http://orphantrust.co.uk>

---

We arrived home yesterday to the most wonderful welcome party, with signs held high heralding our return. Thank you Sofena, Abz, Leon and Tim for greeting us so excitedly and warmly and apologies for the slightly dazed look on our face after 19 hours of travelling!

I feel we all learnt so much from our time in Bangladesh - what kindness really means, how the world might be full of unimaginable suffering but its also full of amazing and proactive people, that you can make the most wonderful friends in all areas of the world. It has also reinforced and strengthened our resolve to help all those children who need us, and support all of the wonderful and life changing individuals and organisations we encountered whilst there.

Thank you Dhaka - we look forward to meeting you again soon!

Orphantrust

the poorest countries in the world with over half the population living on less than $1 a day
By Mema
<http://orphantrust.co.uk>

---