

Our Aims

We are a group of like minded volunteers who want to make a difference to the lives of children. We are blessed with food, shelter, clothing and education simply because of where we are born and live. That blessing comes with a responsibility to help the less blessed.

We are moved by a desire to give something back for the many privileges we enjoy.

Our aim is to get as many children in Bangladesh off the streets as possible, rehabilitate them, educate them and give them an opportunity to the future they deserve. Bangladesh is one the poorest countries in the world and the key solution to its problems is to educate its children. To take a child off the street, educate and rehabilitate them means one less crime, death or poverty statistic for the future.

We scout out grassroots projects that are directly helping, Orphans and street children by giving them food, shelter, education and rehabilitation. We provide financial support for these projects to enable them to continue the vital work they do. Once a child ends up on the streets they often become victim to sex trafficking, organised crime, violence and drugs. These children are the most needy and difficult to help and rehabilitate. This does not mean we shouldn't try.
